ADMINISTRATION

I direct the NMSU Teaching Academy, a four-person unit devoted to enhancing teaching and learning as well as leadership and mentoring. I set the direction of the Academy in terms of programming; teach short courses and one-time workshops; host a half dozen outside speakers per year; manage the budget; and fundraise. The first year I was director, our staff increased by one-third but our participation increased six-fold. We have since doubled our participation without any increase in staff or budget.

Each year, participants can take advantage of a dozen short courses and book discussion groups as well as 100 one-time workshops. Almost 1,000 faculty, staff and graduate students participate in our events annually and almost 300 participate in ten or more hours of events, thus earning a membership in the Teaching Academy. Memberships last one year and are showcased in faculty annual reports and promotion and tenure packets.

Recognition for the NMSU Teaching Academy

In a 2013 interview for the Academy newsletter, Class Acts, NMSU Provost Dan Howard stated, "Teachers are traditionally isolated, and often the discussion of teaching is limited to hallway conversations. The Teaching Academy serves as a catalyst for these discussions. People can come together as a community of teachers and break down the isolation of teaching. From my perspective, the NMSU Teaching Academy does this better than any other teaching center I've seen in the country."

Additionally, the Teaching Academy has received national or international recognition thirteen times in as many years.

- 2015 Director Tara Gray was invited to give a plenary at Frontiers in Education, an international engineering education group: Building a teaching academy at your university: What a faculty member or administrator can do.
- 2013 Engineering education experts, Richard Felder and Rebecca Brent, referred to the NMSU Teaching Academy as the place where "Tara Gray has created the most extensive and widely attended faculty development program we have seen" (Chemical Engineering Education, Winter 2013, 47(1), p. 25).
- The Teaching Academy membership program was one of three model programs selected internationally to be featured at an AAC&U summer institute by Dee Fink, former president of POD Network (the U.S faculty development organization).

- 2012 The Teaching Academy's fund-raising program was featured in Inside Higher Ed.
- 2010 Six NMSU faculty members who participated in the Teaching Academy Teaching Portfolios Workshop had their portfolios included in the book, The Teaching Portfolio by Peter Seldin, Elizabeth Miller and Clement Seldin.
- 2008–2010 Director Tara Gray was invited to present on the Academy and the Academy's fund-raising efforts to Montana State University, New Mexico Highlands University and to the 64 universities in the SUNY system.
- The Teaching Academy was selected by POD Network as a finalist for their Innovation Award for its fund-raising program (2010).
for its membership program (2008).
- 2010 Director Tara Gray was invited to give a keynote on the Teaching Academy model before several hundred other educators in the United Arab Emirates: Building a Teaching Center.
- 2008 The Higher Learning Commission accreditors told the Academy staff and representatives from the Academy Advisory Board that the Teaching Academy was "the best thing since sliced bread."
- 2005 Director Tara Gray was invited to speak on the Teaching Academy model before Thai university presidents and several hundred other educators in Thailand: Building a Teaching Center.
- 2004 The Teaching Academy was singled out for praise by Dee Fink in his presidential address at POD Network.
- The Teaching Academy was one of two teaching centers selected nationally for a visit from eight Thai delegates interested in founding similar centers in Thailand.

For more information about the Academy, and the kind of center I can direct, see <https://teaching.nmsu.edu/>.

Co-authored proposal (with Laura Madson) for College of Arts & Sciences Instructional Committee, "Three IDEAs for Adopting the IDEA Evaluation Instrument for Student Evaluations: A Reliable, Valid and Nationally Normed Instrument," 2002
Faculty Advisor, Alpha Phi Sigma, Criminal Justice Honor Society, 1993–2000
Chapter selected as the Outstanding Chapter of the Year for community service, unity, or educational leadership for each of five years between 1996–2000. Annually, our chapter of twenty students volunteered several hundred hours of service to at-risk youth and the criminal justice community. We also took a dozen students to the national criminal justice meetings annually. To this end, our fundraising increased from less than $1,000 during my first year as advisor to more than $10,000. In my role as faculty advisor, I co-chaired with students major key note speakers or week-long symposiums, which drew average crowds of 500. In 1998, the death penalty symposium featured Sister Helen Prejean (Dead Man Walking) and Randall Dale Adams (Thin Blue Line). In 1999, we hosted Geoffrey Canada, author of Fist Stick Knife Gun and Reaching Up for Manhood. In 2000, we hosted Judge Sol Wachtler, author of After the Madness: A Judge's Prison Memoir.
